Most of us see the world in color, but what happens when that filter is removed? What is revealed? Established in the mid-1980s, Women in Creative Photography, a group of professional and fine art photographers in the San Diego area, explore the medium of black and white photography where light and shadow take stage and raw human emotions come into stark focus. Come experience the work of these diverse and award-winning photographers as they unearth an extraordinary world of timelessness and poetry that exists just beneath the surface of our everyday lives.
